The Tales of YOGI BEAR

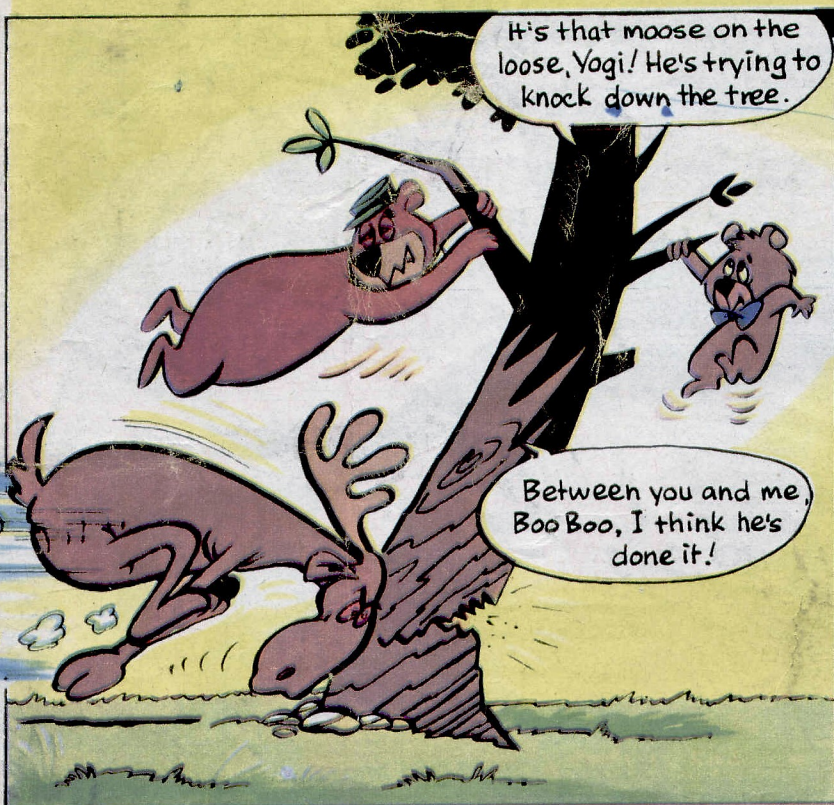

MOOSE ON THE LOOSE

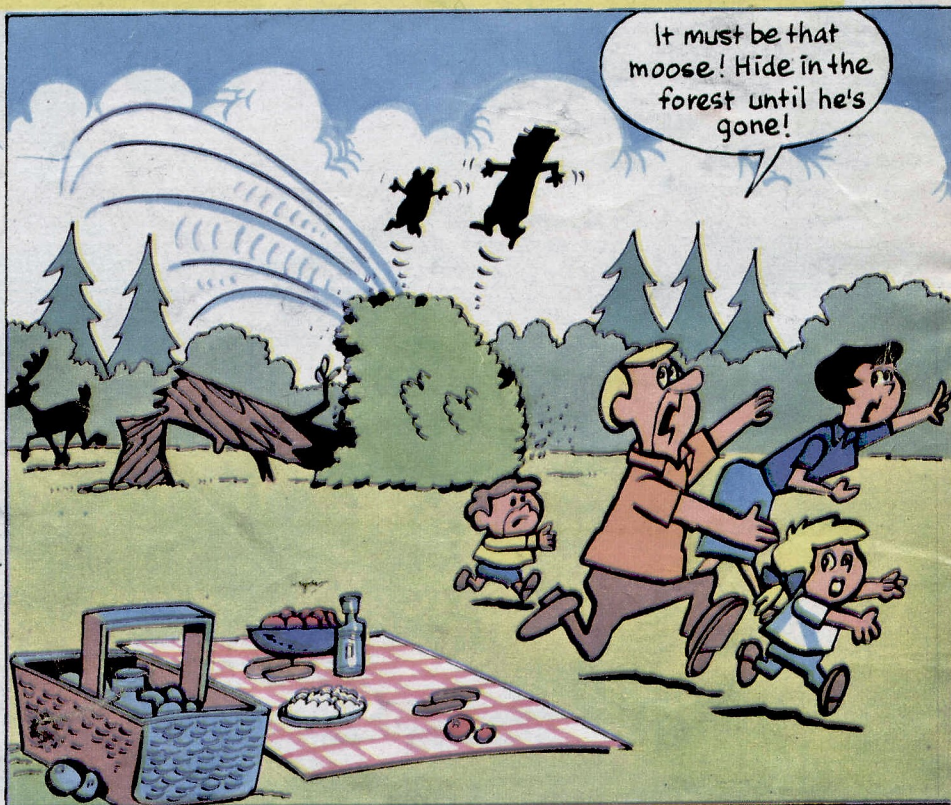

1. Yogi Bear is not really greedy. He just likes to eat a lot, and so does his little friend, Boo Boo. Their favourite eating place is the picnic ground at Jellystone Park. Ranger Smith, who is in charge of the park, always keeps a watchful eye on them. He knows that sometimes they get up to mischief!

2. Yogi was pleased when Ranger Smith told them about the moose that would keep him busy. Straight away Yogi stopped tickling the trout. He climbed a tree to see if any visitors were having tea at the picnic ground. Boo Boo climbed the tree, too, in case the moose was around! Moose can be dangerous!

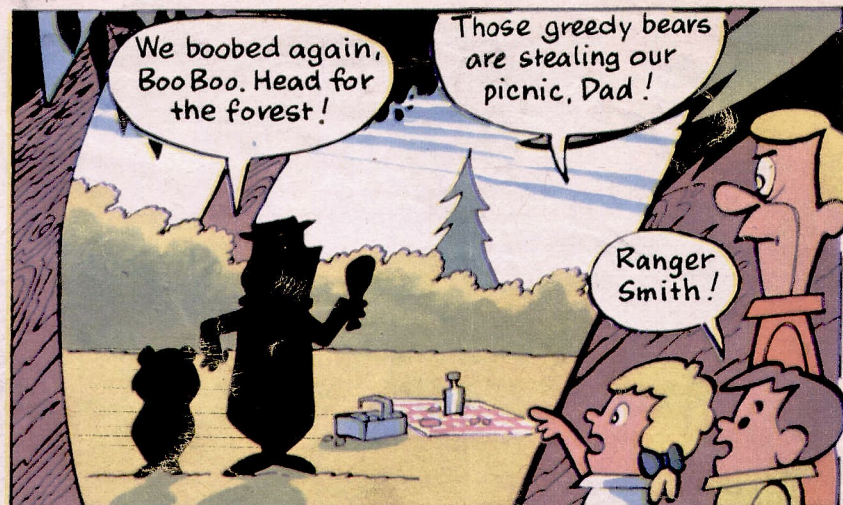

3. Just as Yogi arrived at the top of the tree somebody arrived at the bottom. It was the moose! He couldn't climb trees so contended himself trying to knock them down with his head. SMASH, BANG, CRASH he went at the tree. "Why does he have to pick our one?" cried Boo Boo.

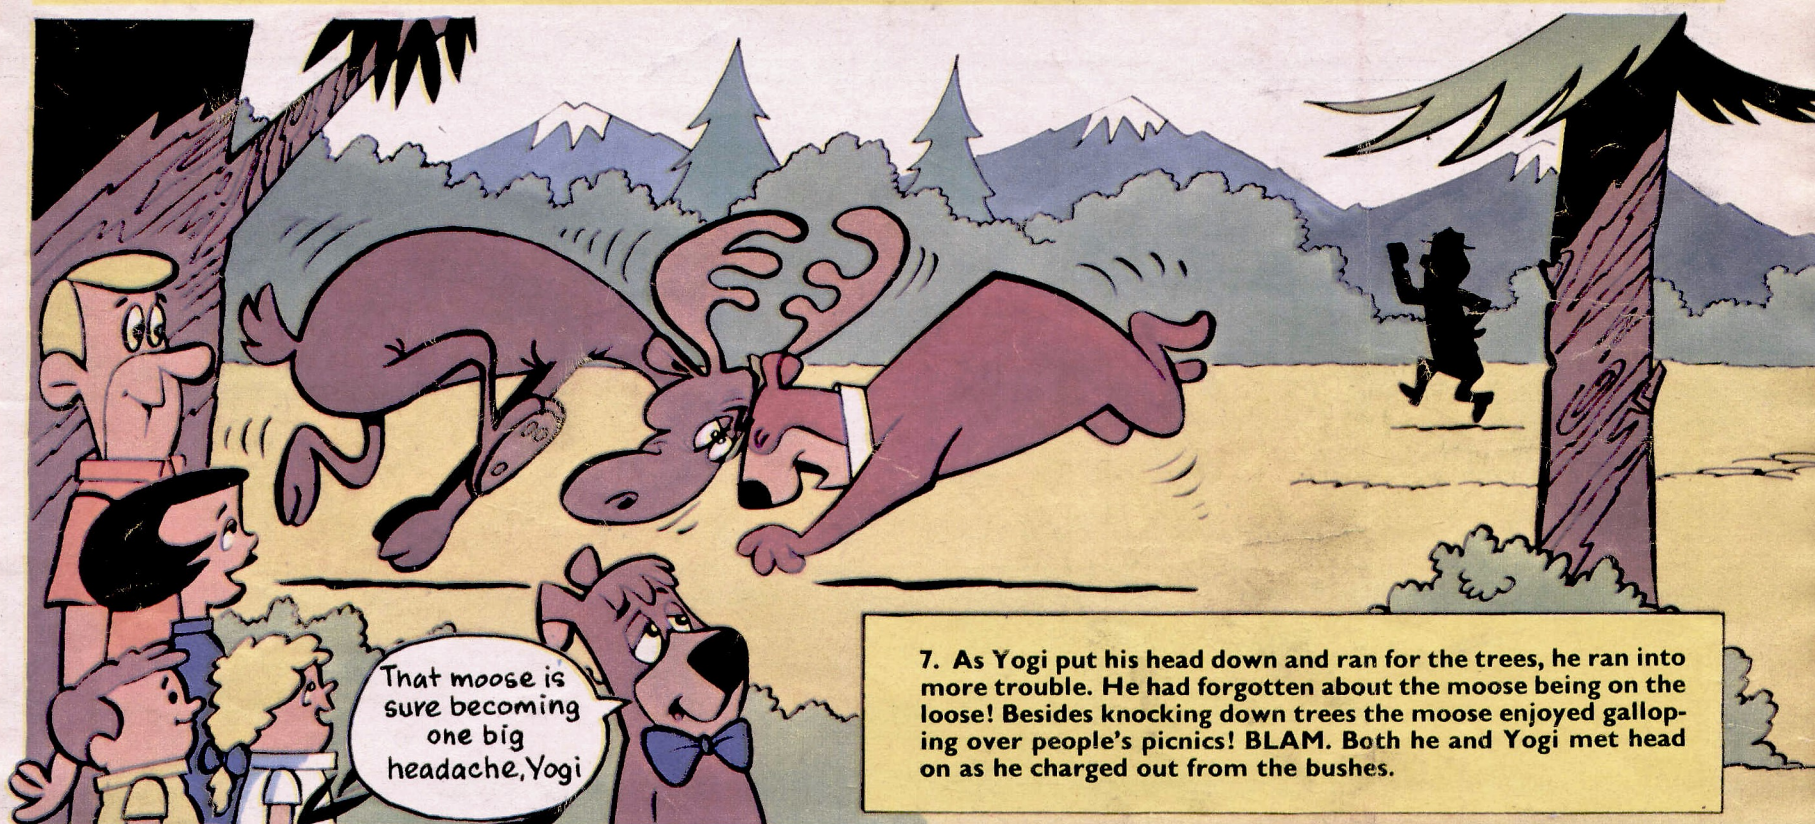

4. With all the crashing and smashing the tree toppled down with poor Yogi and Boo Boo still hanging on. When the picnickers heard the noise they hurriedly hid in the forest. Ranger Smith had already warned them to do so just in case the moose on the loose came around.

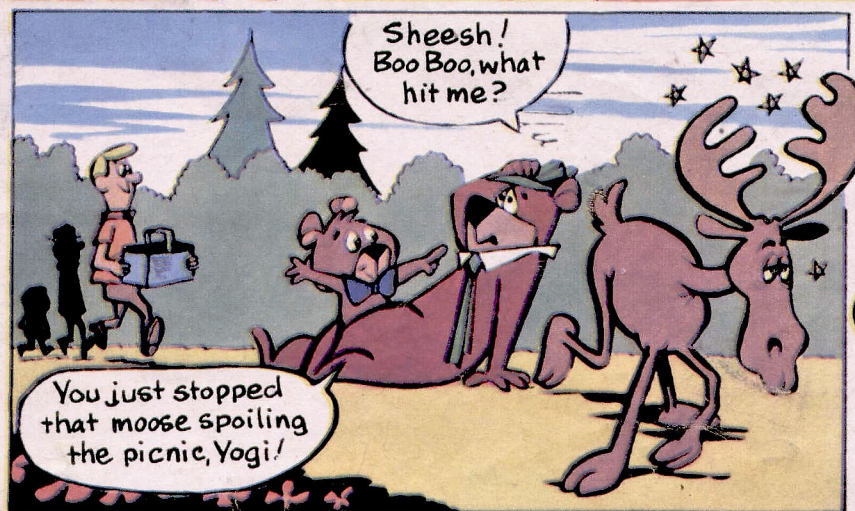

5. Yogi was quite used to falling out of trees and so was Boo Boo. They weren't hurt at all. Then, when Yogi saw the picnic spread, he clean forgot about the fall. "All that lovely food lying there, Boo Boo," he said, "and nobody about to eat and enjoy it!" Of course Yogi hated to see food wasted!

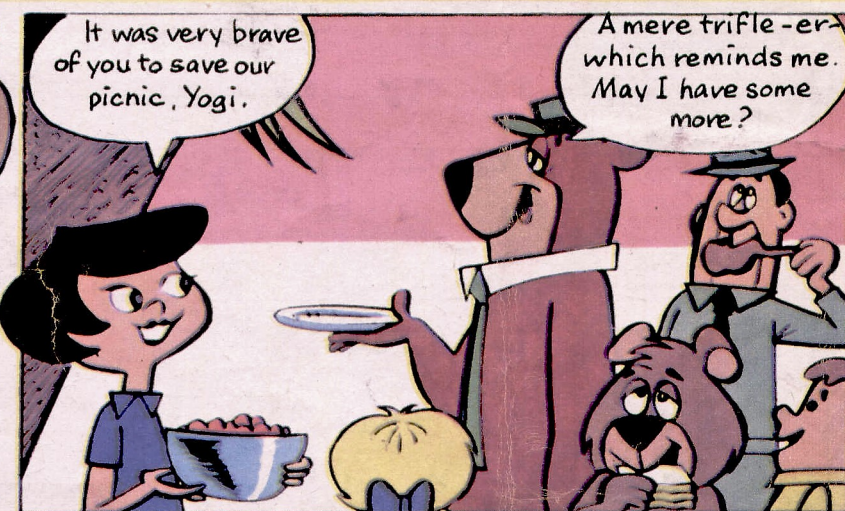

6. When Ranger Smith warned the picnickers about the moose, he had also warned them about Yogi and Boo Boo. And so, from their hiding place behind the trees, they spied Yogi and Boo Boo about to make off with all their food. At once they shouted for help from Ranger Smith!

7. As Yogi put his head down and ran for the trees, he ran into more trouble. He had forgotten about the moose being on the loose! Besides knocking down trees the moose enjoyed galloping over people's picnics! BLAM. Both he and Yogi met head on as he charged out from the bushes.

8. That silly moose certainly felt it when he bumped heads with Yogi. He quickly tottered off back to the forest. He didn't want to bump with Yogi again! The picnickers, very pleased with Yogi for saving their lunch, invited him and Boo Boo to join them.

9. Ranger Smith let Yogi and Boo Boo stay. After all, Yogi did drive the big moose away. Ranger Smith joined in the picnic party, too. He didn't eat much, which was just as well for Yogi and Boo Boo. They could have gobbled up the lot if they had been allowed to!

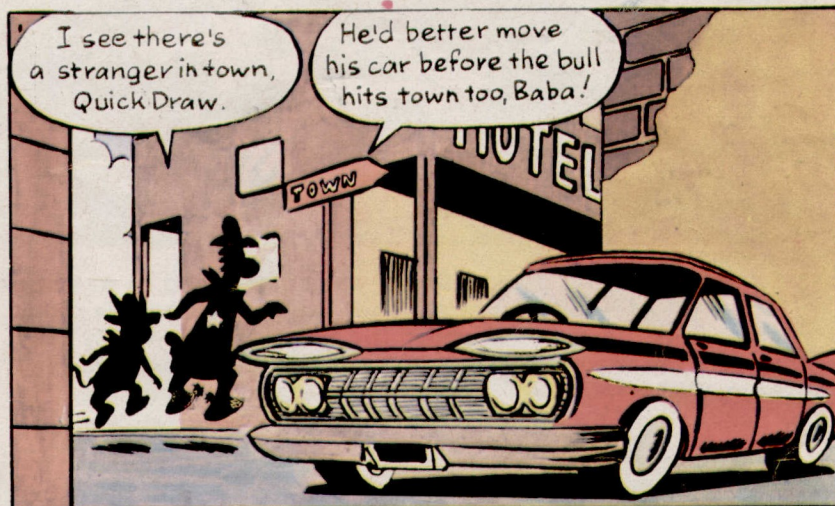

EXCITING TIMES WITH QUICK DRAW MCGRAW

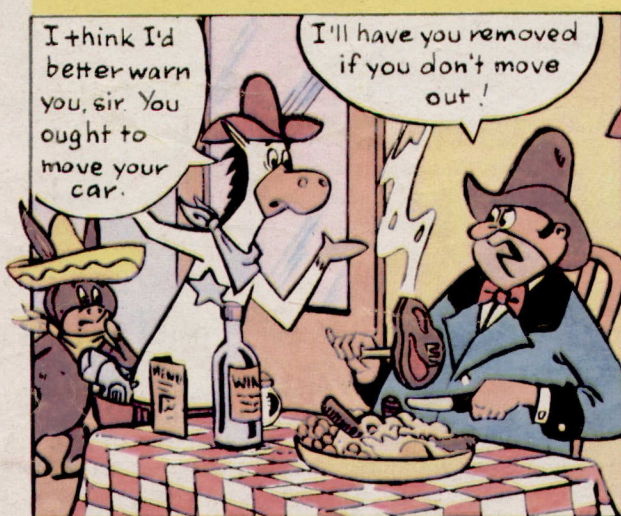

THE BIG CAR

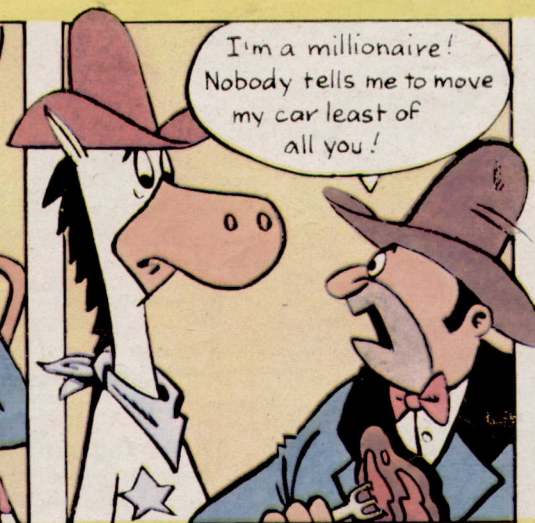

1. Quick Draw's old car had broken down so he and Baba Looney went for a walk in the country. As they returned to town they saw a big bull behind them. They decided to forget about walking and started to run.

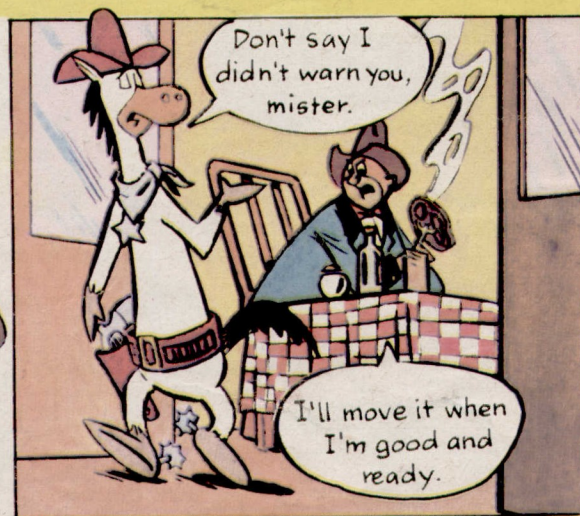

2. While they had been out for a walk a visitor had arrived in town. His big car seemed to take up all the space in the street. When Quick Draw saw it he knew he must be a very important man.

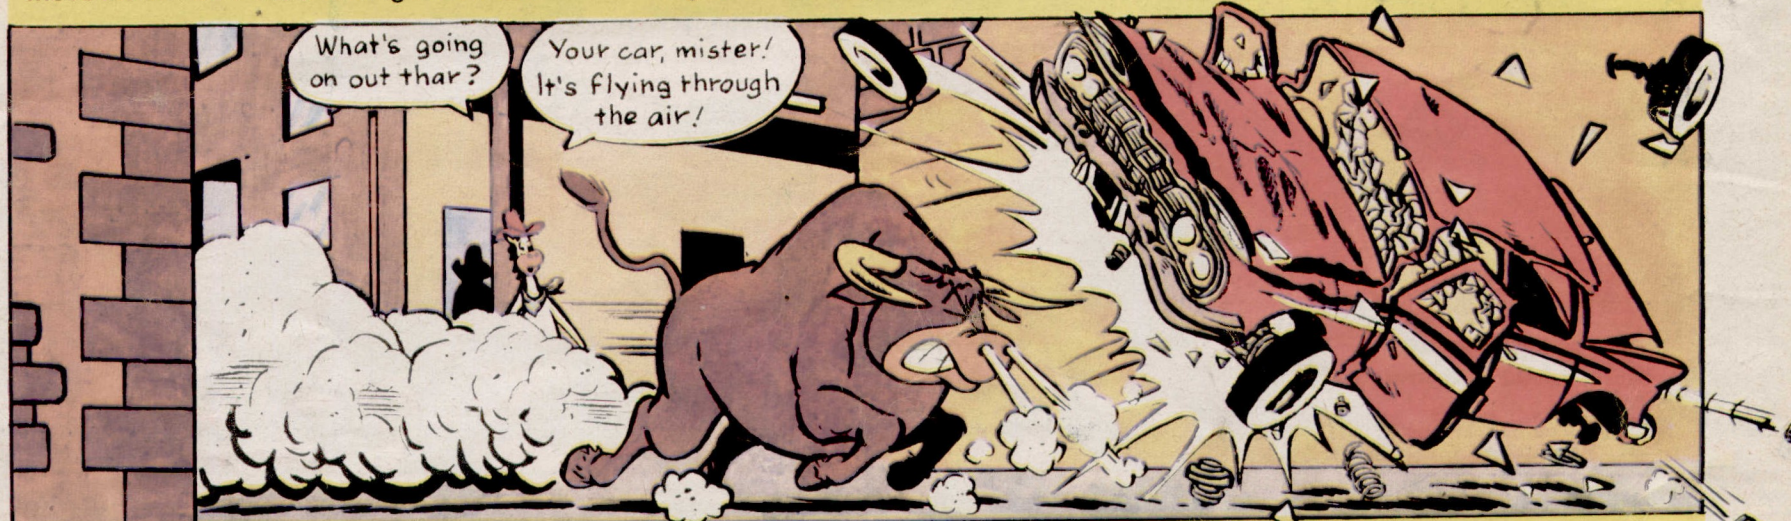

3. Going into the hotel, Quick Draw found the car's owner eating his lunch. He wasn't very pleased when Quick Draw told him to move his car as it was blocking the street.

4. The big man was very rich. He was also very rude to Quick Draw, who was only trying to do his duty.

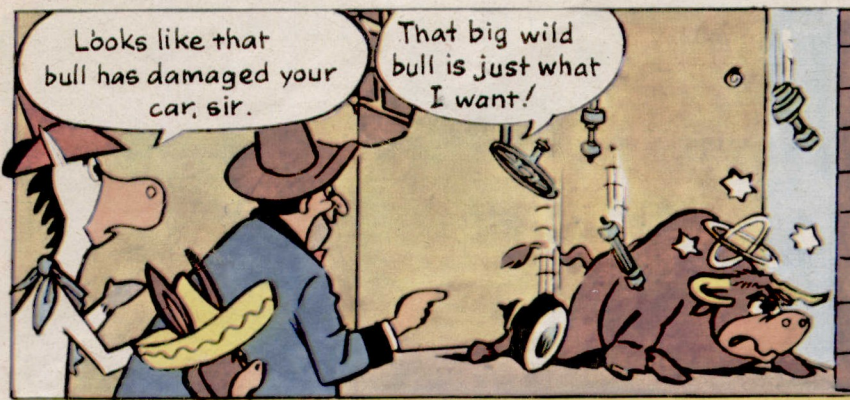

5. What could Quick Draw do? Nothing, it seemed. He decided to get to his office and join Baba before the bull arrived. Had you forgotten the bull? Quick Draw hadn't!

6. Quick Draw was just leaving the hotel when the big bull hit town. As it came tearing along the High Street, it also hit the rich man's car. KERAMP! It went flying through the air and landed quite a distance away. Quick Draw thought the rich man would also be seeing red when he saw what had happened to his car! It was a complete wreck. Never again would anyone be able to take a drive in it. It wasn't good for anything any-more but the rag and bone man!

7. When the bull bumped the car he also bumped his head. Then the rich man came out from the hotel. He didn't see his car. The big bull was sitting where it had been. Quick Draw had warned him, hadn't he? So it served him right!

8. The rich man wasn't at all upset about losing his car because he had found a big, wild bull for his ranch. As he hurried to catch a train home, he offered to pay Quick Draw well to deliver the bull. Quick Draw agreed.

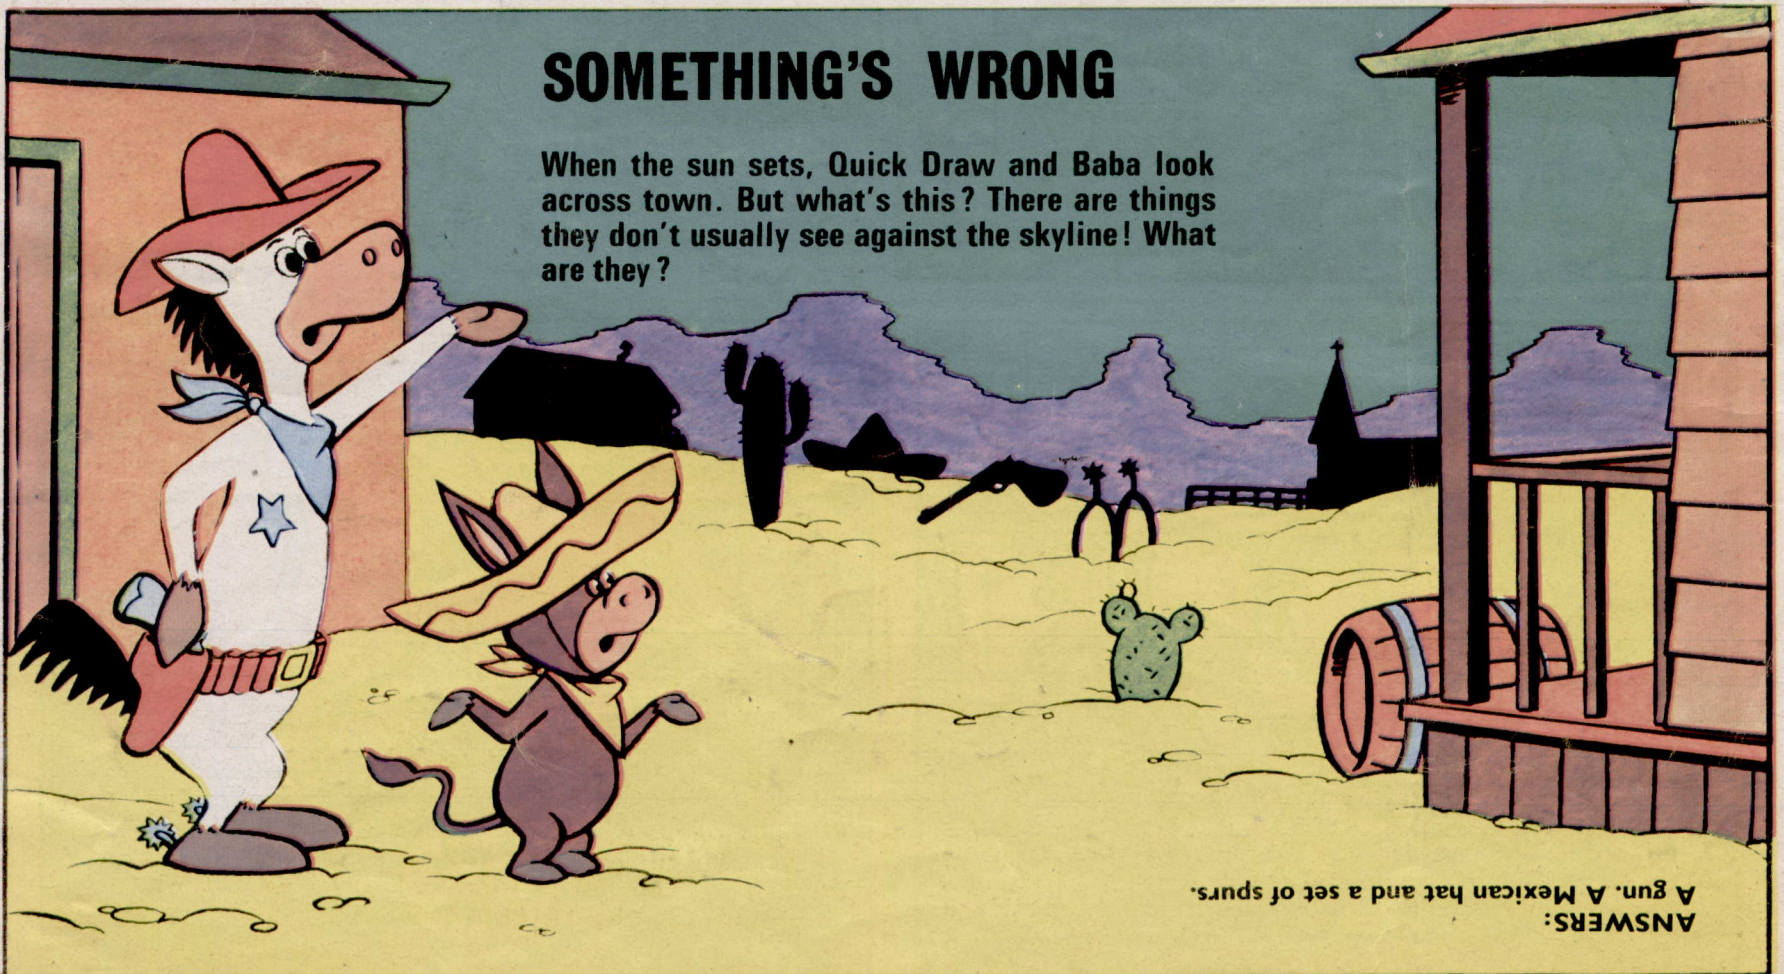

9. Quick Draw searched the wreck of the big car for spare parts. "Now I can get my old car going again," he happily chuckled to Baba.

10. Quick Draw, with Baba, drove his car to the ranch with the big bull trotting behind. The millionaire was pleased to see them and invited them to supper. Baba was glad he went along for the ride. It was delicious!

SOMETHING'S WRONG

When the sun sets, Quick Draw and Baba look across town. But what's this? There are things they don't usually see against the skyline! What are they?

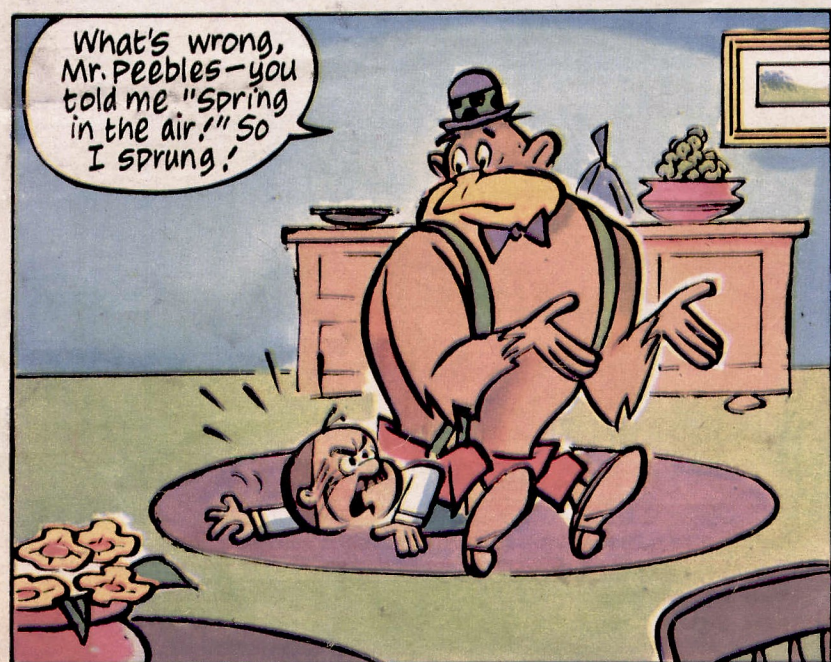

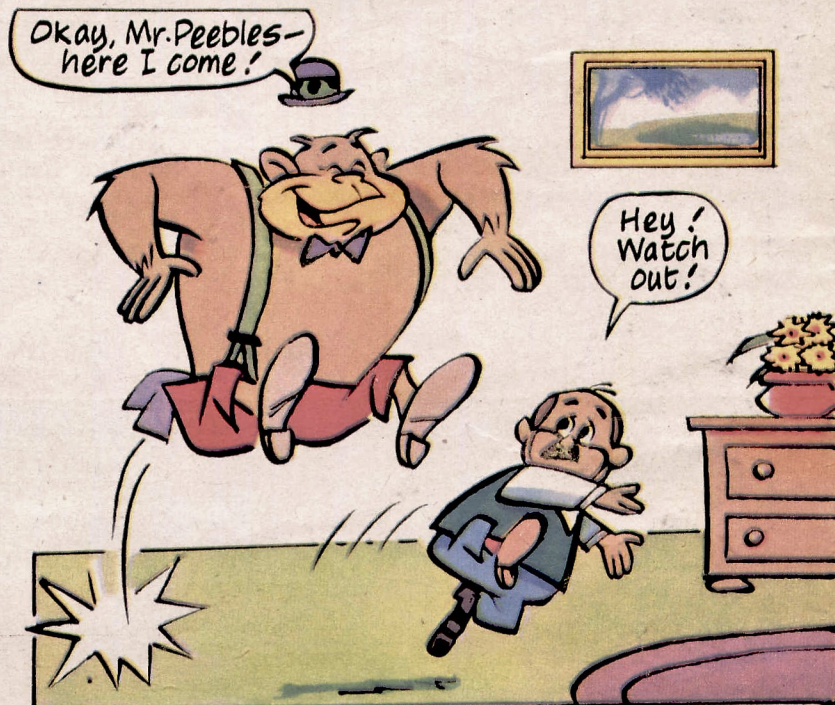

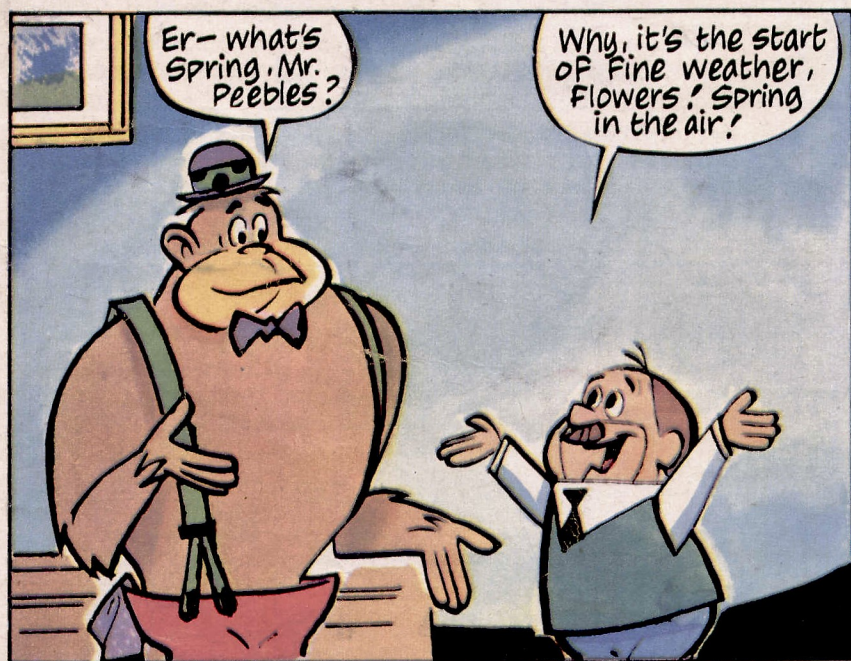

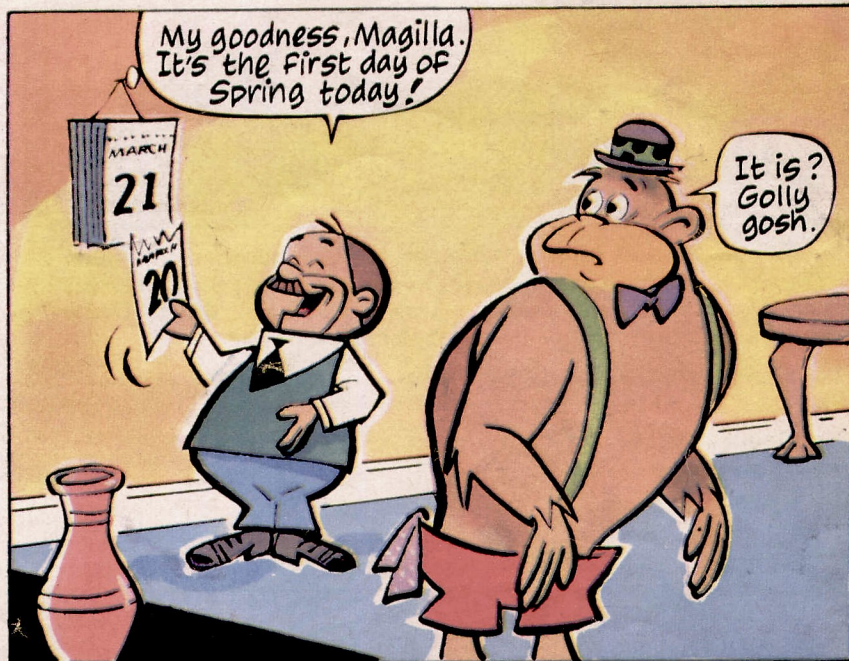

ANSWERS:
A gun, A Mexican hat and a set of spurs.

Here we have some jolly number puzzles to make you think, says Yogi Bear.

CHICKEN TEASER

2 chickens in front of a chicken:
2 chickens behind a chicken and 1 chicken in the middle. How many chickens altogether?

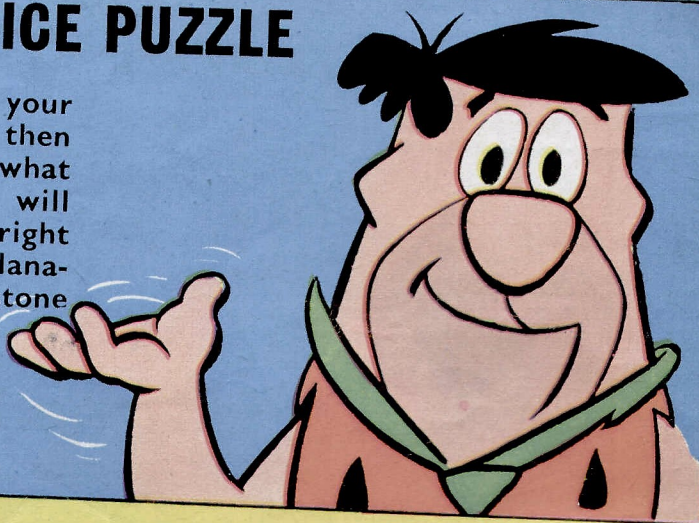

THE FIFTEEN PUZZLE

How good are you at adding up numbers? Here is a puzzle to really make you put on your thinking cap. Using the figures from one to nine, fill up each square in this grid. There is one snag. When you have completed it, each line must add up to exactly fifteen. That means every line, across, down and diagonally! That's a real problem for you. If you can't do it, the answer is upside-down below.

1 2 9 5 8

FRED FLINTSTONE'S DICE PUZZLE

This is something that will puzzle your friends. Get them to throw a dice, and then tell them that you can tell them what number is hidden underneath! They will think it's magic, or that you can 'see' right through the dice. There is a simple explanation really though, and Fred Flintstone will let you into the secret if you look below in the 'Answers' box

$$2 + 2 + 4 + 2 - 4 + 2 - 4 + 2 + 2 - 4 - 2 =$$

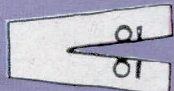

If you know what the Plus and Minus signs mean, you can do this very long sum that Yogi Bear has set you. It looks like a lot of twos and fours, but it's not too difficult really. Try to work it out before you look at the answer!

Magilla Gorilla has worked out a funny sum here. He seems to think that half of eighteen equals ten. I think he's got it wrong don't you?

ANSWERS

MAGILLA GORILLA
Draw the figure 18 on a piece of paper, cut it through the middle—and you have two tens!

FRED FLINTSTONE'S DICE PUZZLE
The secret is to know that the opposite sides of dice always add up to seven! So you see, if a five-spot is on top, the hidden side will be a two-spot. If a three-spot is on top, then the hidden side must be a four-spot. Easy, isn't it?

BOSS CaT

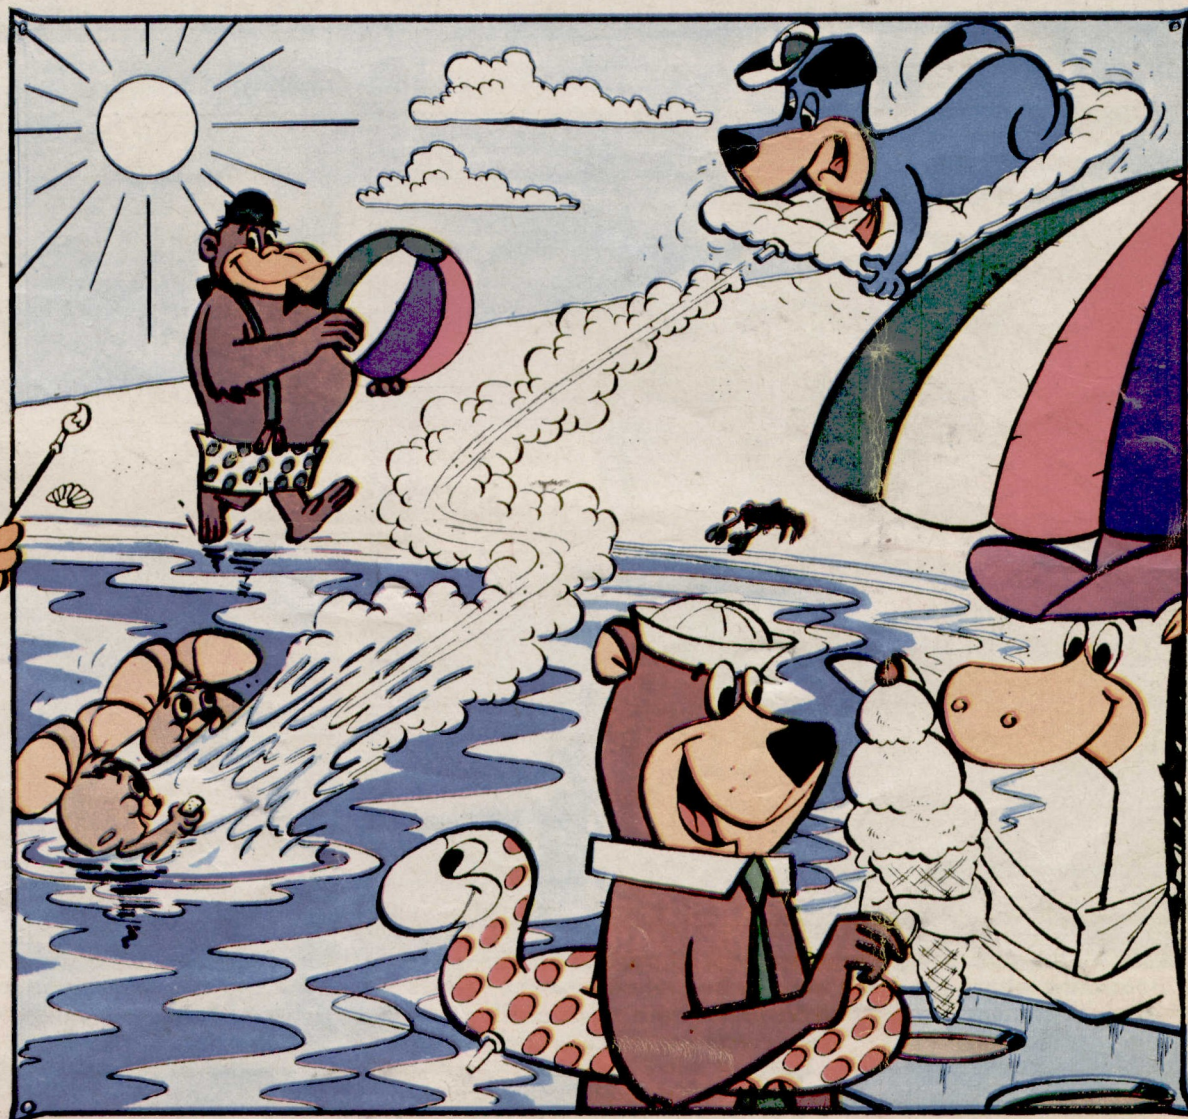

BANANA SKINS

COLOUR IT YELLOW

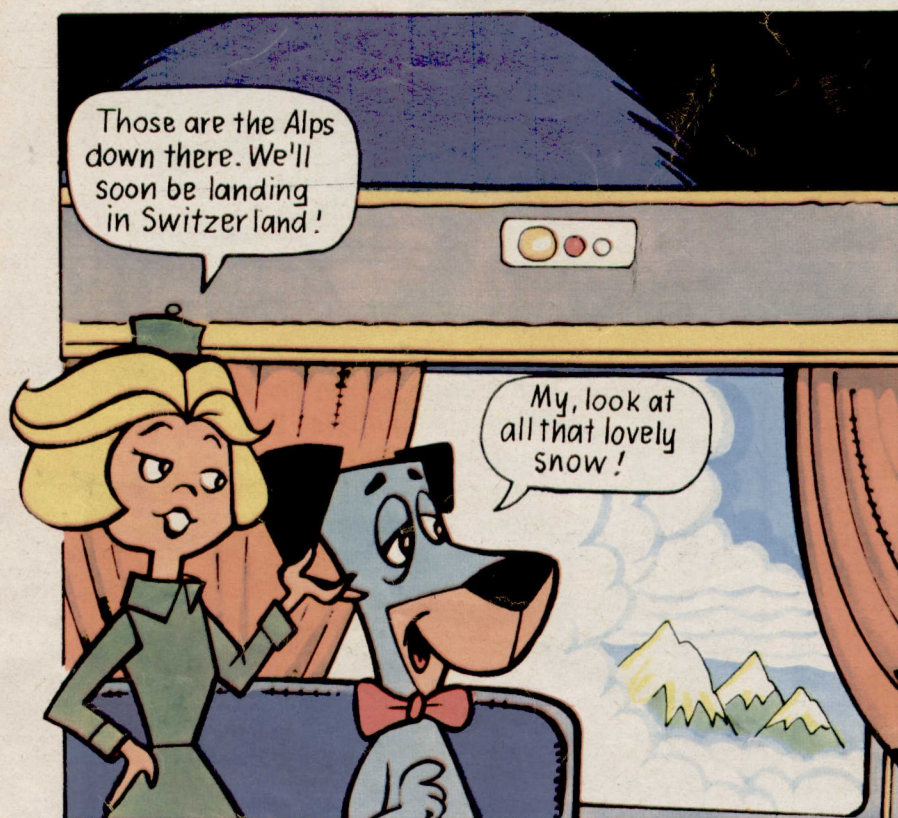

This week Boss Cat has tried his hand at painting. He has painted a grand summer scene. It is a beach and Yogi and all his friends can be seen. But Boss Cat has left one colour out, the colour yellow. No, he did not forget. He thought that perhaps you would like to put in the missing colour yourself. Use crayon, or paint, if you prefer to.

The HAPPY DAYS OF HUCKLEBERRY HOUND

SWISS ALPS

1. After the heat of Timbuctoo, Huck decided to travel, using the ticket he had won in a T.V. show, to find fun in cooler climates. Switzerland, as you all know, is very famous for its snow, and that's where Huck decided to go. He got on a plane and flew north to the Swiss Alps.

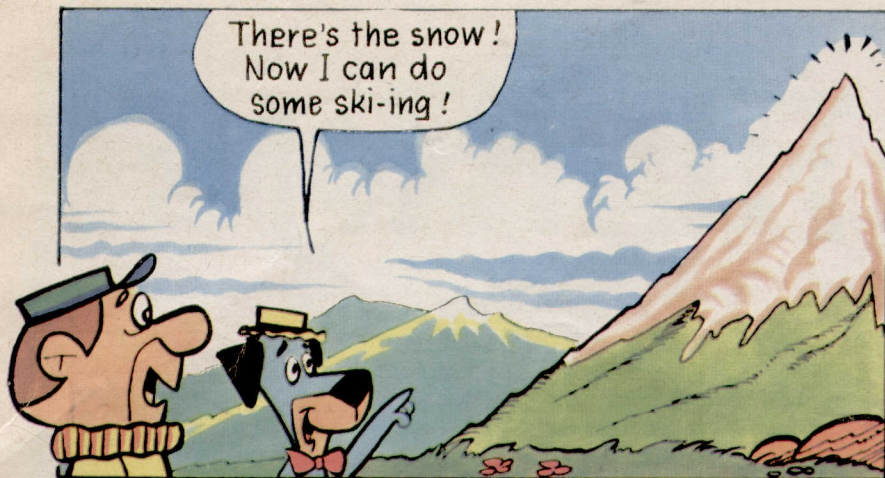

2. Because he was on holiday, Huck could do as he pleased. He bought himself a pair of skis and sticks. He had seen pictures of skiers whizzing down the mountain sides, happily skimming over the crisp snow. So he decided that he would have a go! He thought it was easy to ski, but wait and see!

3. Huck used his ticket again to travel by cable car up into the mountains where the snow was. As he looked into the valleys below he thought it was like travelling in a train and a plane at the same time. He thought it was great fun as up and up the car went skywards.

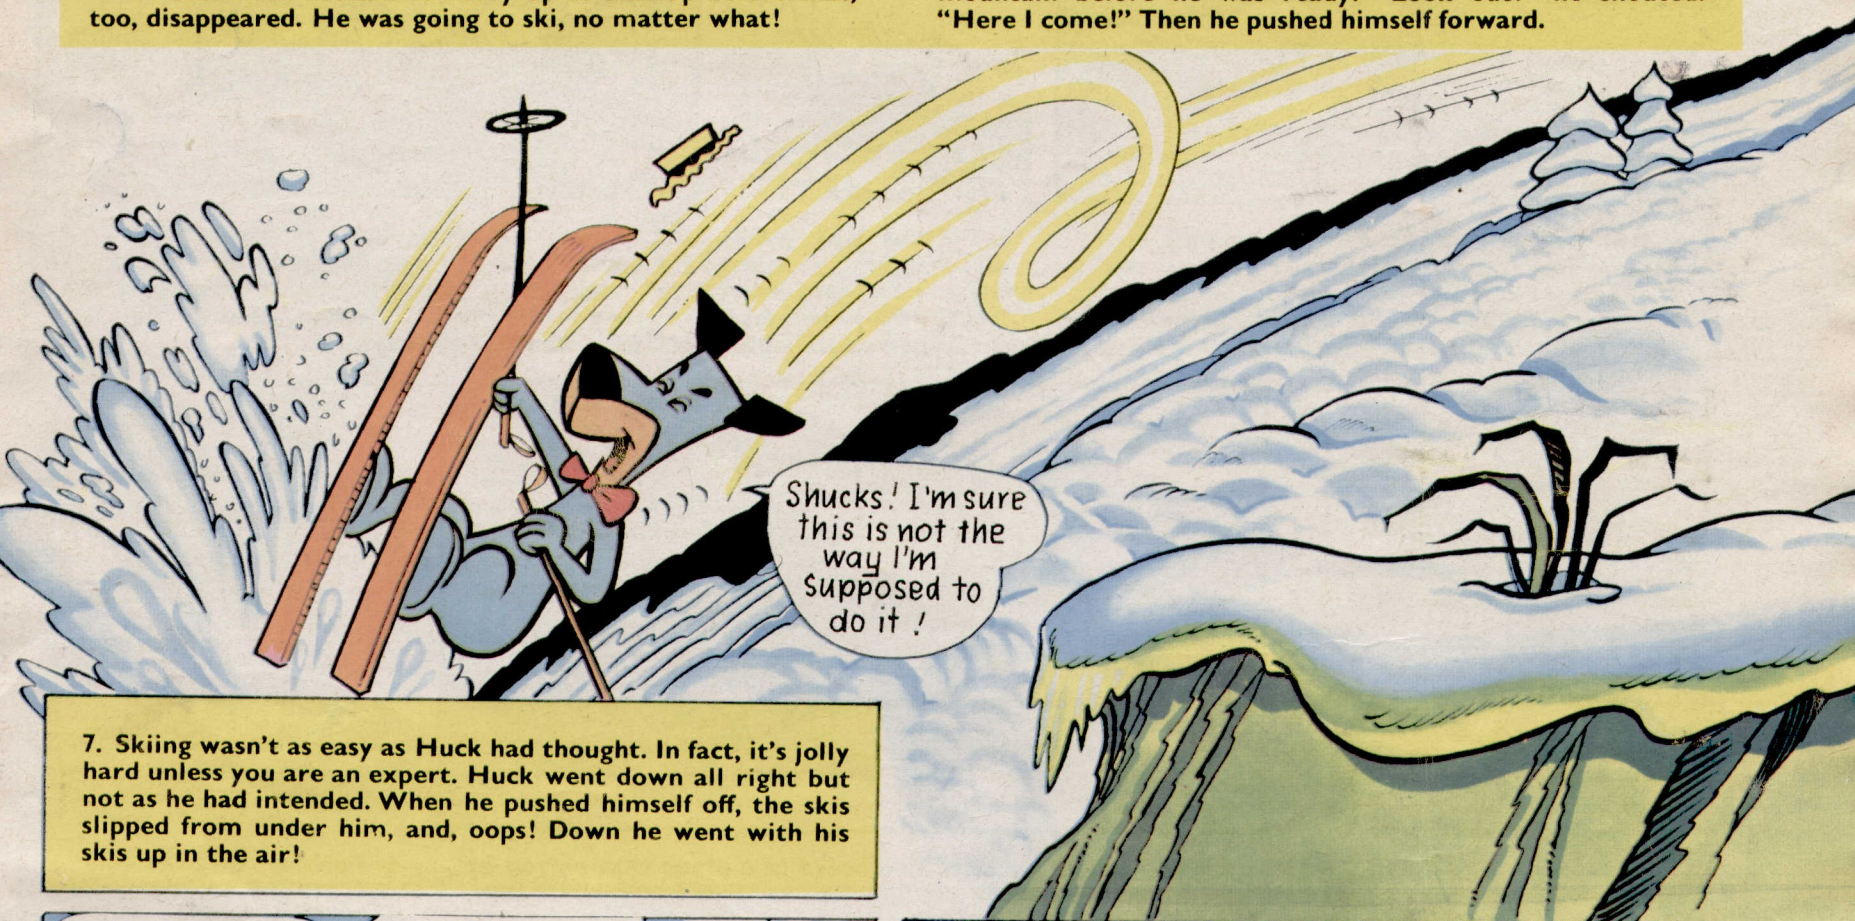

4. After the cable car ride, Huck had to use his ticket again for another ride up the mountains. This time he rode on a ski-lift. At last, he reached the top. But when he looked around, he saw that there was hardly any snow at all! Just about enough to make a snowball!

5. Suddenly the clouds above disappeared and high above, on another peak, Huck saw what he had come for. Snow, lovely white snow! He decided to hurry up to the top before that, too, disappeared. He was going to ski, no matter what!

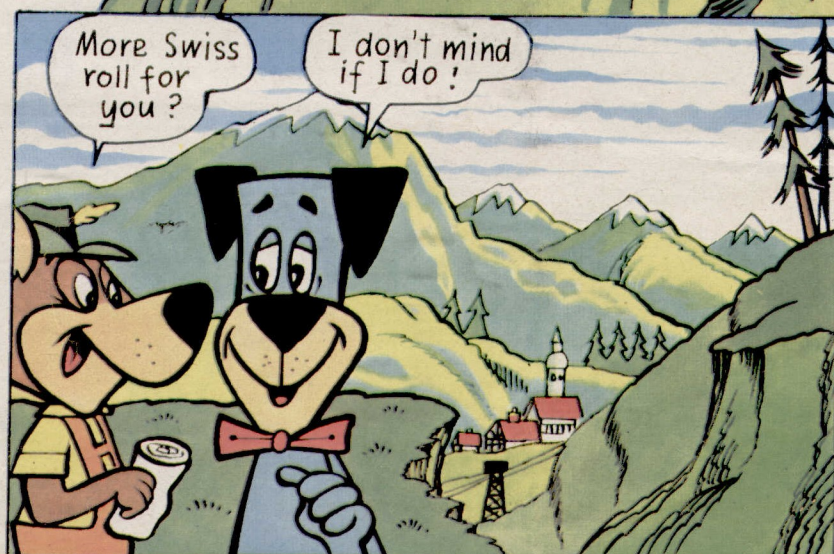

6. When Huck reached the snowy peak, he happily put on his skis. He had a job to stop himself from sliding down the mountain before he was ready. "Look out!" he shouted. "Here I come!" Then he pushed himself forward.

7. Skiing wasn't as easy as Huck had thought. In fact, it's jolly hard unless you are an expert. Huck went down all right but not as he had intended. When he pushed himself off, the skis slipped from under him, and, oops! Down he went with his skis up in the air!

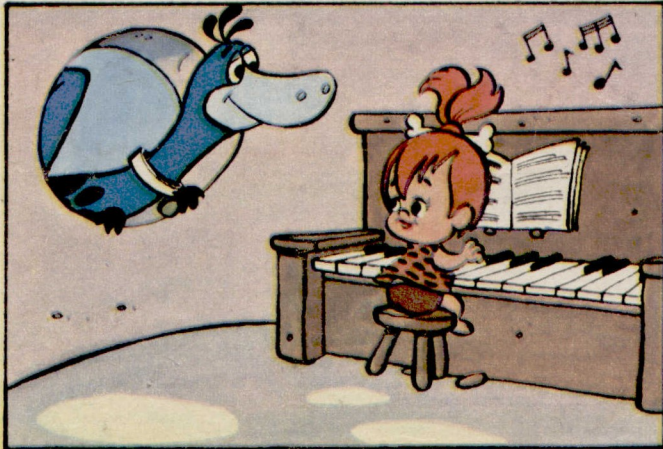

8. Down he tumbled until he slid out of the snow and into a grassy slope. But Huck wasn't hurt. "Lucky there is nobody up here. I must look silly," Huck said to himself. "You certainly do," said a voice nearby. "Fancy trying to ski when there isn't any snow!"

9. Like Ding-a-ling back home, the little Swiss was a very friendly fellow. Huck said perhaps he should have gone sight-seeing instead. The Swiss laughed and said by coming up the mountain he'd done both. They then sat down for a picnic lunch and admired the wonderful view.

FUN with The FLINTSTONES

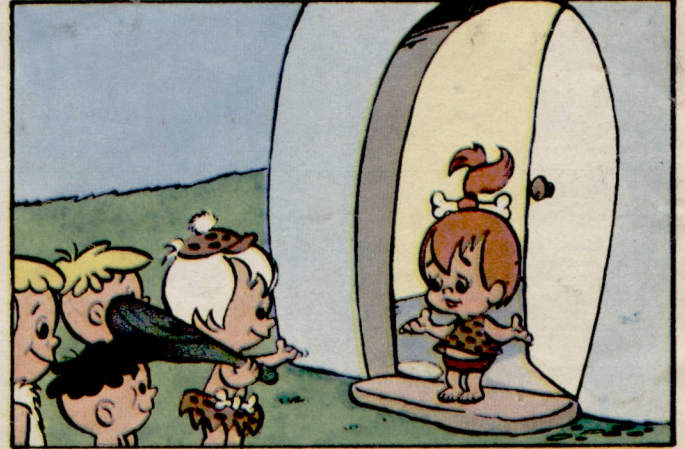

PIANO PRACTICE

1. It was a lovely day for going out to play, but Pebbles had to stay indoors and practice the piano Fred Flintstone had just bought for her. He hoped Pebbles would become a famous pianist, but she thought Daddy was being silly.

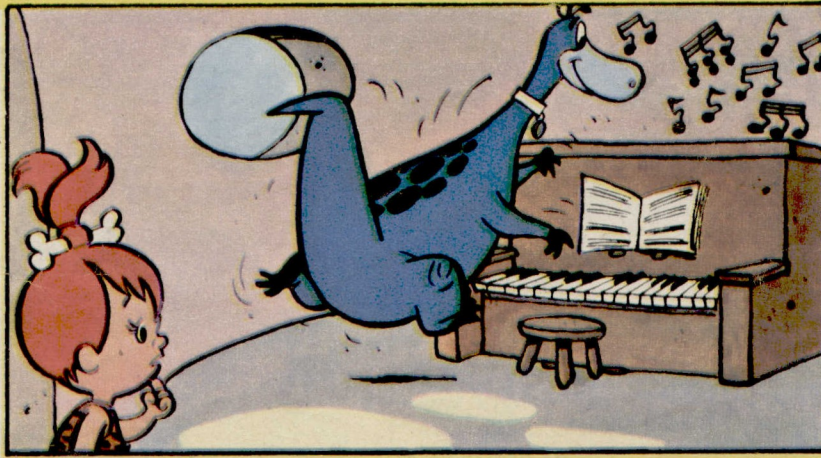

2. Pebbles was plink-plonking away when the doorbell rang. Fred and Wilma were out so she answered the door.

3. It was Bam-Bam and the Cave Kids who wanted Pebbles to play. She said she'd love to but she had to practice the piano, otherwise she wouldn't become a famous pianist like her Daddy wanted her to be.

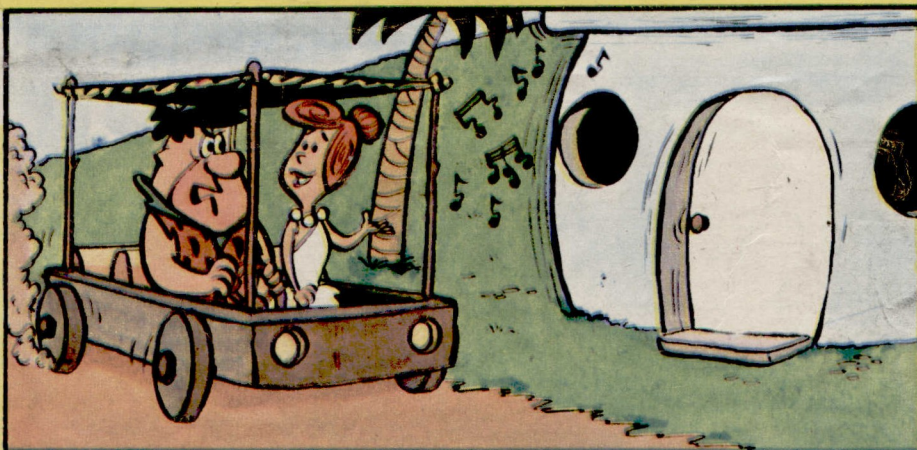

4. As they stood talking, they heard a tinkling sound. Who could it be? thought Pebbles. There was nobody at home but her.

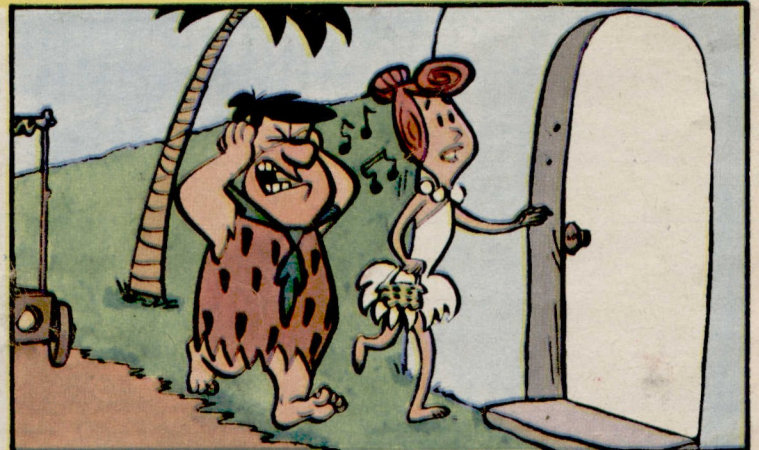

5. Pebbles had never before heard of a piano that played by itself. She tip-toed to the door to see. Dino, her pet dinosaur, was happily plink-plonking on the piano! He seemed to be enjoying himself so much that Pebbles thought it would be a shame to stop him.

6. Pebbles isn't usually a naughty girl, but she decided to let Dino carry on with the practice while she went out to play.

7. When Fred and Wilma arrived home in the car, Pebbles was still out playing and Dino was plonking away. He didn't know much about music but he had learned that the harder he thumped the keys, the louder was the sound. Fred could even hear the notes above the noise of his noisy car.

8. Poor Fred had to put his fingers in his ears to drown the terrible sound. Dino was really going to town on that old piano! Even Wilma began to look worried at the way their house was starting to shake up and down. What sort of music was this? she wondered.

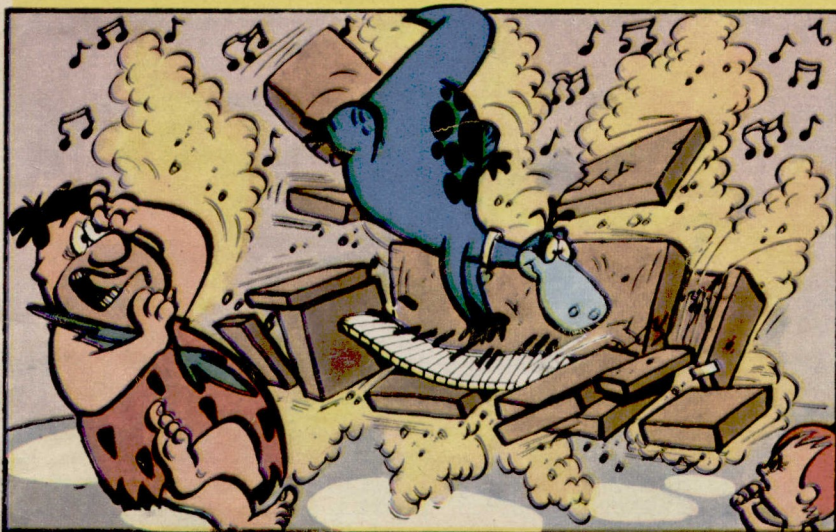

9. Fred rushed in to tell Pebbles not to play so loudly. He really was surprised to see Dino thumping away. "STOP! STOP!" yelled Fred as the pictures began to fall off the wall. But Dino went on playing.

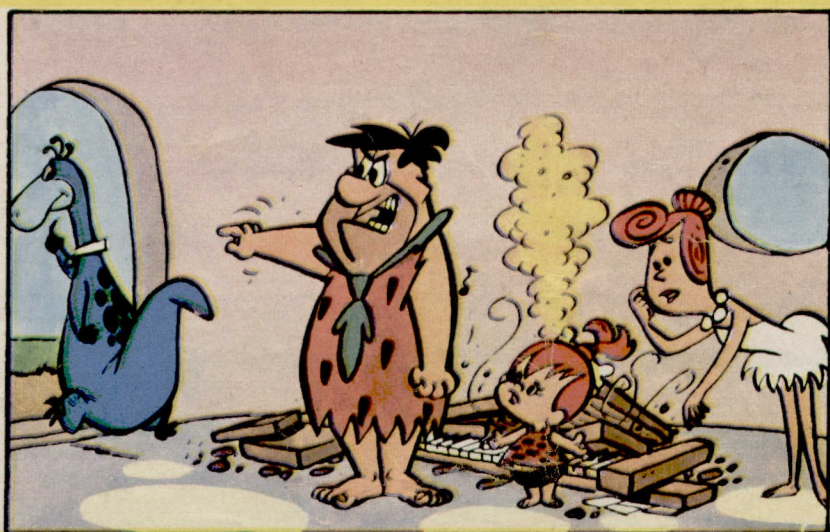

10. Then Dino found a key that didn't plink when he plonked it. Perhaps he should hit it harder, he thought.

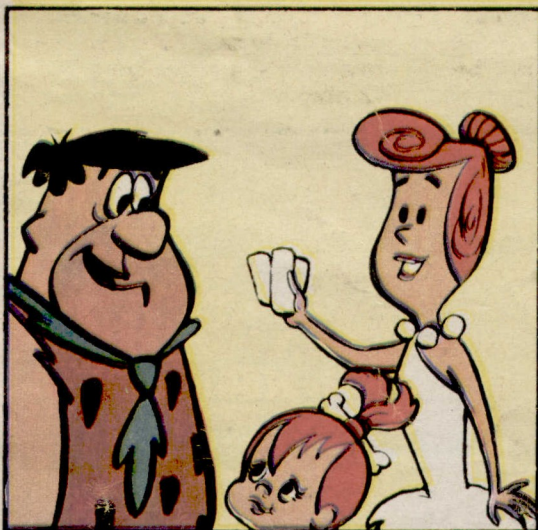

11. Dino began to bang the piano again. He really meant to get that note to sound. THUMP! THUMP! BANG! BANG! he went. The noise was very loud for he didn't even hear Fred shouting, and we all know how loud he shouts!

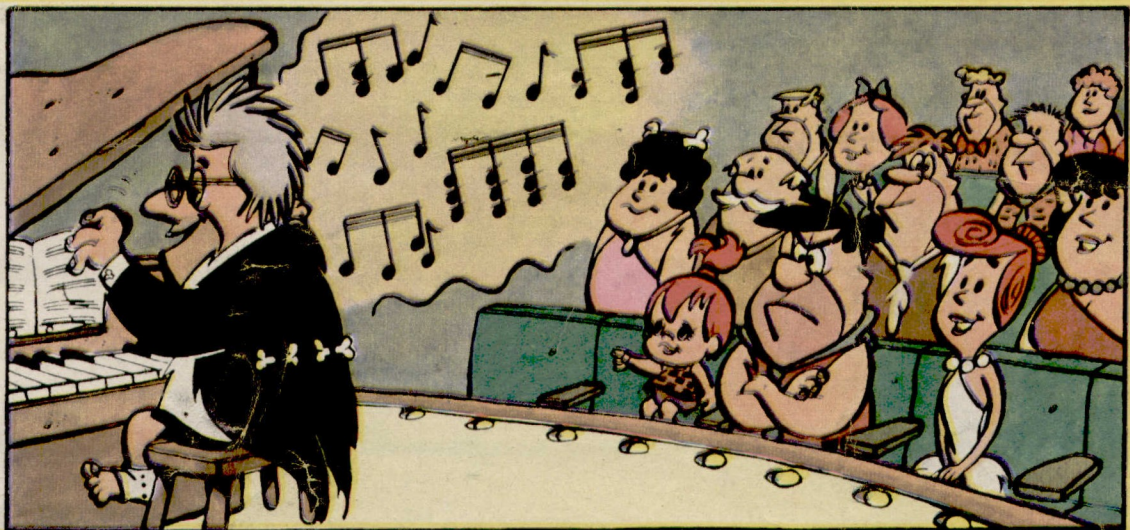

12. When Pebbles saw the car outside, she hurried indoors as fast as she could. She knew that if the piano was smashed poor Dino would get the blame. Alas, she was too late. Just as she dashed into the room, the old piano gave up the struggle and fell to bits.

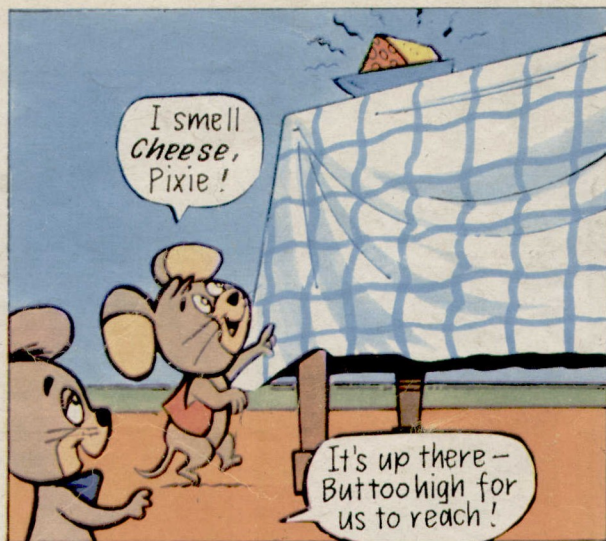

13. Fred was furious and ordered poor Dino out of the room while Pebbles tried to explain that really she was to blame. The old piano would never play again. But Wilma saw some pieces of paper drifting to the floor. They must have been in the old piano all the time.

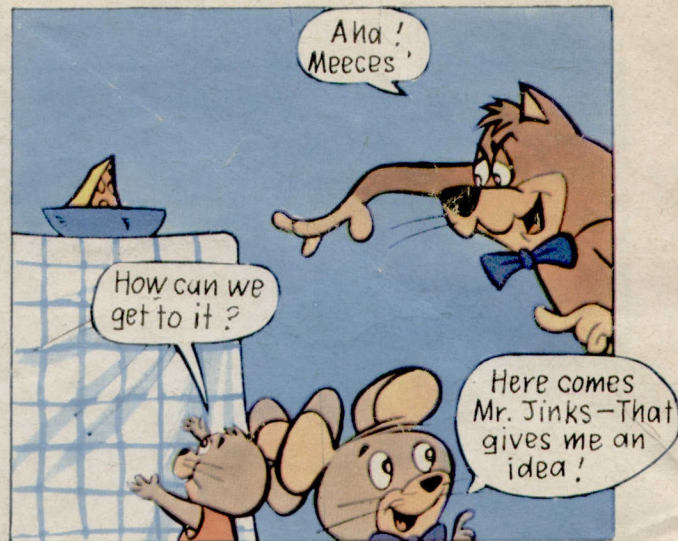

14. Wilma picked them up. They were expensive tickets for a piano concert where the famous Professor Pianissimo was playing. The tickets were worth more than Fred paid for the piano.

15. The man who sold Fred the piano told him that he was welcome to the tickets. So Wilma and he took Pebbles to hear the great pianist play. When Fred heard him, he quickly gave up the idea of Pebbles becoming a great piano player. Fred didn't care too much for classical music. And anyway, Pebbles preferred to play with her friends, so she was happy too!

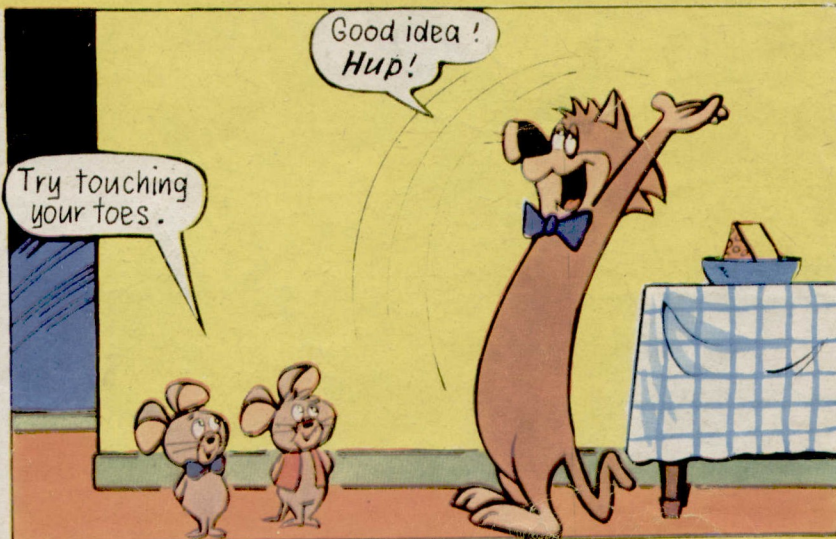

1. Pixie and Dixie, the merry little mice, were tripping around the house one day when Dixie's nose began to twitch. "I smell cheese, Pixie," he cried. "Where is it?" Pixie looked round. Then he saw it. But, oh, dear! It looked as though the two little mice would find it very hard to get at the lovely cheese.

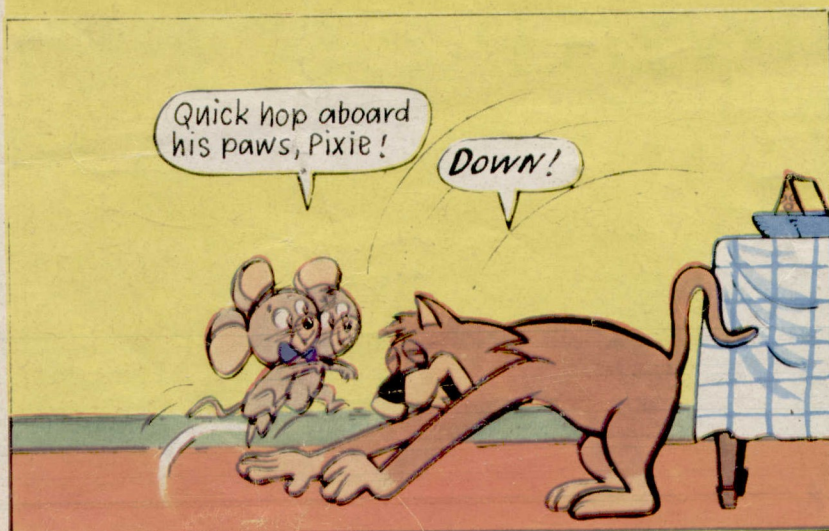

2. The piece of cheese was right up on top of the table! It was much too high for our little mice to reach. "How can we get to it?" they asked themselves. While they were wondering what to do, up came Mr. Jinks, the cat. "Aha! Meeces!" he cried. Mr. Jinks always calls mice "meeces."

3. Mr. Jinks decided not to try to catch Pixie and Dixie this time because he could see they were puzzled about something. "What are you meeces up to?" he asked them. "Oh, nothing," said Pixie. Then Dixie had an idea. "Mr. Jinks, you are getting too fat," he said. "You need exercise!"

4. "Me, fat?" said Mr. Jinks, looking at his tummy. "You need more exercise," said Dixie again. "Come along, try touching your toes!" Pixie laughed. "I'll bet you can't do it, Mr. Jinks." Now, Mr. Jinks is very proud. He likes to think he can do everything. So Pixie's words were a challenge!

5. "Just you watch me!" boasted Mr. Jinks. Then he stretched up high and bent down with a swoosh to touch the tips of his toes. This was just what Pixie and Dixie had hoped he would do. "Quick, Pixie!" cried Dixie. "Jump on his hands as quickly as you can!"

6. Pixie and Dixie jumped on to Mr. Jinks's hands. When he swung his hands up again, our little mice went sailing up high with them. When they were over the table, they let go and flew down to land next to the cheese! Mr. Jinks wondered where on earth they have gone to! But we know, don't we!
